RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Affective Development Lab (ADL)
Palo Alto University (PAU)
Palo Alto, CA

June 2024 - Present

Doctoral Researcher

Supervisor: Eleanor Palser, PhD

- Conduct affective developmental psychology research across the lifespan with children and adolescents with neurodevelopmental and learning differences with a focus on investigating everyday challenges in Autistic youth, and novel intervention(s) with sustainable treatment delivery models
- Co-principal investigator on a randomized control trial evaluating anxiety and well-being outcomes (adaptive behaviors, emotion regulation, quality of life, and gastrointestinal symptoms) of a clinical yoga intervention with autistic youth (ages 7-17) and the possible mediating role of interoception and executive functioning on anxiety reduction using child-reports; parent reports; task measures; and mobile, cognitive assessment software, which has included set-up of a recruitment pipeline with 20+ local clinics, schools, and community agencies, and writing a full-board review PAU IRB application

- Train in a range of affective science methods including mixed methods and psychophysiology
- Conduct behavioral data analysis (R; SPSS) using frequentist and Bayesian statistical models
- Co-design research protocols and tools tailored for Autistic people for implementing inclusive, ecological research
- Write academic and private grants to fund independent research projects
- Generate research collaborations between PAU and UCSF and Stanford clinics
- Perform literature reviews on neurodevelopmental conditions (dyslexia, ADHD, autism, specific learning disabilities) in children, adolescents, and adults and related assessments and interventions
- Contribute to research design and analysis strategy across ADL dissertations and internal research

Early Interventions Clinic (EIC)

Fall 2023 - June 2024

Palo Alto University (PAU)/Stanford University

Palo Alto, CA

Doctoral Researcher

Supervisor: Matthew Cordova, PhD

- Assisted a doctoral intern with analysis strategy for a large-scale research project led by Stanford YogaX investigating barriers to implementing yoga as a clinical intervention in healthcare settings
- Conducted literature searches related to yoga and mindfulness interventions for PTSD and other stressor-related disorders, and novel group and family-based treatments for PTSD

Neuroscape

January 2016 - March 2020

Weill Institute of Neurosciences

University of California, San Francisco

San Francisco CA

Lab manager/Staff Clinical Researcher

Supervisor(s): Melina Uncapher, PhD; Joaquin A. Anguera, PhD; and Adam Gazzaley, MD, PhD

- Managed interdisciplinary research teams for multiple NSF-funded translational cognitive neuroscience investigations within an educational neuroscience research network (EdNeuro) across UCSF, Stanford, and UC Berkeley
- Managed a large-scale 2 year longitudinal study validating ACE-X evaluating cognitive and learning outcomes of an executive functioning intervention (Engage) for children in middle childhood, and led data collection operations with 7 partner schools
 - Administered in-classroom 1:1 and group administrations of cognitive and academic achievement assessments with children ages 7-12 (200+ administrations; 15-100 participants per session)

- o Scored, analyzed, and interpreted data of cognitive and academic achievement assessments
- o Assisted post-doctoral students and faculty principal investigators with big data strategy
- o Recruited and trained 40 research assistants and a lab manager
- Disseminated study findings as an invited poster presenter at academic conferences in neuroscience and education
- Assisted development of a cognitive control software called Adaptive Cognitive Evaluation (ACE-X), a mobile neuropsychological assessment battery that captures individualized executive functioning profiles for diverse populations across ages and clinical groups, within a clinical neurosciences program and educational neurosciences program
 - o Led ACE-X feasibility pilots with typically developing children and children with ADHD and depression
 - o Co-facilitated ACE-X focus groups with UX/UI designers and research stakeholders
 - o Participated in design meetings with engineers, software developers, interdisciplinary researchers
- Supported principal investigators with data feedback conferences to educators and parent research beneficiaries
- Assessment measures used:

Learning and Memory Lab
University of San Francisco (USF)
San Francisco, CA

August 2014 – December 2016

Undergraduate Research Assistant/Independent Researcher

Supervisor: Benjamin J. Levy, PhD

- Conducted learning and memory research investigating a memory phenomenon called retrieval induced forgetting (RIF) and associations between RIF, emotions, and executive functioning in healthy young adults (data collection; literature reviews; study design; recruitment)
- Led an independent replication study investigating cognitive mechanisms of stress and memory in young adults
- Conducted 1:1 and group-based data collection administrations of computerized cognitive tasks and a behavioral stress-induction task with undergraduate participants
- Scored, analyzed, and interpreted cognitive task measures
- Disseminated study findings as an invited poster presenter at academic conferences in psychology
- Recruited and trained a study coordinator and research assistants
